

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation. If Sinclair Broadcasting is allowed to air anti-Kerry media, they should also be required to give pro-Kerry Media equal time, such as the movie "Going Upriver."

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. But when large companies control the airwaves, we get more of what's good for the bottom line and less of what we need for our democracy. Instead of something produced at "News Central" far away, it's more important that we see real people from our own communities and more substantive news about issues that matter.

Sinclair's actions show why we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. They show why the license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard. I feel that the FCC should do more in the way of demanding that all their responsibilities (Sinclair Broadcasting included) be more open, unbiased, and fair in their presentation of programming and information. Thank you.
